The Los Angeles Herald very justly remarks that we are in an era of exaggeration in most things and especially in the statistics of individual wealth. We notice all the time sums and quantities in print that common sense alone would in print that common sense alone would declare enormous, and we can only account for it by a tendency to sensationalism, taking the place of romance, now dead, or ignorance of values as such in the contributors to papers, or deliberate misstatement knowingly without a shadow of probability. Look at the late lists of individual wealth in this plain Republican country. Take the story of Mr. Rockafeller's Golconda income, $20,000,000 a year, possibly put forth injuriously to inflame the masses. It will not do that; it will foster foollah ambition. No private person who ever lived had an income of such vast proportions. It is 5 per cent on $400,000,000, and represents the total revenues of many kingdoms whose names have figured prominently in the affairs of the world. Few people stop to think of what $1,000,000 is, and a fortune whose principal can be rightly stated at that figure is still colossal even in New York or in any of the other money-centers of the world. It was usual to place the wealth of William H. Vanderbilt at $300,000,000 about the time of his death, but this figure was a gross exaggeration, and his wealth was divided up amongst his children at his death. The dead millionaire dazzled the nations when he bought $50,000,000 of United States bonds in a single transdeclare enormous, and we can only ac-

death. The dead millionaire dazzled the nations when he bought $50,000,000 of United States bonds in a single transaction, but prior to that purchase he had parted with prodigious blocks of his railway stocks. Probably the largest individual incomes ever chronicled were those enjoyed by the bonanza kings during the heyday of the output of the Consolidated Virginia and California mines during the twelve years from January, 1875, to March, 1887, when $2,160,000 a month was disbursed in monthly dividends by those companies. During a portion of that time Mr. John W. Mackey's income is said to have reached $800,000 a month.

that time Mr. John W. Mackey's income is said to have reached $800,000 a month, or at the rate of $10,000,000 a year. The fortunes of the Rothschilds are, of course, phenomenni, but that family is a numerous one, and it is doubtful if the aggregate of their incomes amounts to the sum credited here to one man. It is high time that respectable, responsible papers, financial and commercial, set themselves against exaggeration in statistics. It will be found that the truth will pay best in the end. Perfection we cannot attain, but we can avoid shocking common sense and losing the respect of our readers.

AN AMUSING INCIDENT.

How's Good Republican was Scandalized by the Conduct of a Chief Clerk.

Secretary Proctor's new move in naming Chief Clerk Tweedale of the War Department to serve as Acting Secretary of War during his absence caused an amusing scene the other day, says a called at the Department in Washington and stated that he had something of importance to say to the Secretary. He was informed that the Secretary was absent, but was conducted into the presence of the Acting Secretary.

His business, he declared, was to complain of the retention in office of a certain person named John Tweedale, who had been appointed chief clerk under a Republican administration, had retained the office through four years of Democratic rule, and was still, unless some change had been made very recently, enjoying the honors and emoluments that ought to be going to a man of better defined political sentiments. Mr. Tweedale kept his countenance and gravely inquired whether the visitor had any charges to put on file against the chief clerk.

"No," was the answer. "I merely wish to stamp it as a scandal that a man who is so poor a Republican as to be willing to hold office under Cleveland should be retained by Harrison."

Having delivered himself of a harangue of some length in condemnation of milk and water partisanship, he bowed himself out—Mr. Tweedale treating lim with the utmost courtesy and promeising to draw Secretary Proctor's attened himself out—Mr. Tweedate treating him with the utmost courtesy and prom-ising to draw Secretary Proctor's atten-tion to the matter immediately on his return. The story of the interview, which was overheard by some of the chief clerk's associates, has been a stand-ing joke at the department ever since.
